ABQ Health Partners Presents $10,000 Donation to The Storehouse

Donation Will Provide 60,000 Meals to Albuquerque Residents

Albuquerque, NM – The Storehouse, the largest food pantry in Albuquerque, today displayed $10,000 worth of food during a check presentation from ABQ Health Partners to illustrate the impact the medical group’s donation will have on families in central New Mexico.

The check for $10,000 was presented by Harry Magnes, MD, President and CEO of ABQ Health Partners, the the largest independent physician-owned medical group in the southwest. The donation will kick-off what is expected to be a lasting relationship between ABQ Health Partners and The Storehouse.

“We’re so happy to be able to support the important work of this vital organization,” said Dr. Magnes. “The Storehouse’s mission of feeding the hungry is inspiring, and ABQ Health Partners is grateful for the opportunity to give this gift.”

The Storehouse has provided free food and clothing to the working poor of central New Mexico for over 40 years. The organization serves 17,000 families and provides over 2 million free meals to New Mexicans each year.

ABQ Health Partners is the largest physician-owned medical group in the Southwest and offers a comprehensive array of health care services backed by more than 40 medical specialties to cover the health of New Mexicans from head to toe.
